

Pick a Paper Pumpkin

Local farms have been devastated by Irene and subsequent storms. While farmers cope with spring floods by replanting, this unusual late summer crop loss just before harvest is impossible to rectify. Please support our local farms. There is still produce available, and many farms will be selling paper pumpkins in lieu of the thousands that were floated away by the rains. A paper pumpkin on your porch this Halloween is akin to flying a flag for a national holiday, and will signify your support for our local treasure – the small, independent farms of our communities. This one simple gesture can mean a lot.
